Frontiers and Boundaries: encounters on China's margins. (Asiatische Forschungen, 156) viii,253p Wiesbaden 2012 978-3-447-06785-0 12,992
:Historical topics addressed include the Tang-Uyghur relationship in architecture, the transgression of conceptual boundaries between diverse religious traditions, the use of the Chinese written medium by foreigners, the maintenance of border controls on the southeastern, maritime borders, Ming-Timurid relations as reflected in different intellectual traditions, shifts in Muslim historiography, and Islamic jurisprudence. Furthermore two studies focussing regionalism within Xinjiang, and problems of migration and identity in the Russian-Chinese-Mongolian border region lead to contemporary issues as well.

Historicizing the "Beyond": the Mongolian invasion as a new dimension of violence? (Heidelberg Transcultural Studies, 1) 196p Heidelberg 2011 978-3-8253-5746-7 6,902
:Hardly any act of violence connects Europe and Asia like the Mongolian Invasion in the 13th century did. The experience of the Mongols' attack became in the process of its historicizing also in a comparative or transcultural perspective extremely important for the identity of the defeated countries. Considering this fact, one has to wonder, whether the Mongols reached a new dimension of violence that left "traumatic marks" with a long-time impact on the collective consciousness.

 :Thackston here provides lucid, annotated translations that make this key material accessible to a wide range of scholars. Mirzar Haydar's 'Tarikh- i - Rashidi' provides a history of the of the Khans of Moghulistan, the vast stretch of territory between the ancient cities of Central Asia and Mongolia.
 Khwandamir's The Reign of the Mongol and the Turk covers the major empires and dynasties of the Persianate world from the 13th to the 16th century,
- including the conquests of the Mongols, Tamerlane,
 and the rise of the Safavids.

Warlords, Strongman Governors, and the State in Afghanistan. xii,374p N.Y. 2014 978-1-107-02392-5 14,850
 :Warlords have come to represent enemies of peace, security, and "good governance" in the collective intellectual imagination. In this book Dipali Mukhopadhyay asserts that, in fact, not all warlords are created equal. Under certain conditions, some of these much-maligned actors are both able and willing to become effective governors on behalf of the state. This provocative argument is based on extensive fieldwork in Afghanistan, where Mukhopadhyay examined warlord-governors who have served as valuable exponents of the Karzai regime in its struggle to assert control over key segments of the countryside.

:Lisa Ross's ethereal photographs of Islamic holy sites were created over the course of a decade on journeys to China's Xinjiang region in Central Asia, historically a cultural crossroads but an area to which artists and researchers have generally been denied access since its annexation in 1949. These monumental images show shrines created during pilgrimages, many of which have been maintained continuously over several centuries; visitation to the tombs of saints is a central aspect of daily life in Uyghur Islam, and its pilgrims ask for intercession for physical, mental, and spiritual ailments.

Local Politics in Afghanistan: a century of intervention in the social order. xxii,281p London 2013 978-0-231-70418-2 9,100

:From the nineteenth century to today, Afghanistan has contended with relentless foreign intervention. Not only have external powers, such as British India, the Soviet Union, Pakistan, and NATO, egregiously interfered in local affairs, but various Afghan governments, including monarchical, Communist, Islamist, and ostensibly democratic ones, have also repeatedly meddled with the state. The Afghan population has nevertheless remained robustly resilient in the face of this upheaval, finding concrete ways to handle external influences while preserving the most valuable aspects of their political system.

Lost Enlightenment: Central Asia's golden age from the Arab conquest to Tamerlane. xxxvii,634p ills. Princeton 2013 978-0-691-15773-3 5,925

:In this sweeping and richly illustrated history, Starr tells the fascinating but largely unknown story of Central Asia's medieval enlightenment through the eventful lives and astonishing accomplishments of its greatest minds--remarkable figures who built a bridge to the modern world. Because nearly all of these figures wrote in Arabic, they were long assumed to have been Arabs. In fact, they were from Central Asia--drawn from the Persianate and Turkic peoples of a region that today extends from Kazakhstan southward through Afghanistan, and from the easternmost province of Iran through Xinjiang, China

Multiple Moralities and Religious in Post-Soviet Russia. 244p N.Y. 2011 978-0-85745-209-2 10,500

:In the post-Soviet period morality became a debatable concept, open to a multitude of expressions and performances. From Russian Orthodoxy to Islam, from shamanism to Protestantism, religions of various kinds provided some of the first possible alternative moral discourses and practices after the end of the Soviet system.
